

Private Sector
Health Alliance of Nigeria

IMPACT | SUSTAINABILITY | VISIBILITY

“I believe that it will take a movement like this, a public-private coalition, to extract synergies and transform health outcomes in Nigeria. Therefore, I call on companies and individuals to be part of the vanguards leading the private sector multi-sectoral movement towards an impactful change in the country's healthcare sector.”

- Aliko Dangote (GCON)

How PSHAN is revolutionising healthcare in Nigeria

Niger's President Mohammed Bazoum honours Aliko Dangote (GCON).

Aliko Dangote (GCON), the head of Dangote Industries Limited, and five other Nigerians have received national honours from the president of the Republic of Niger, Mohammed Bazoum, in appreciation of their contributions to the improvement of ties between Nigeria and Niger.

President Mohammed Bazoum, who presented the honours, praised Nigeria as one of its closest neighbours and allies. Businessmen Alhaji Aliko Dangote, President of the Dangote Group, and Abdulsamad Rabi'u, President of the BUA Group, as well as the two governors of Jigawa and Zamfara States, received the honours.

How PSHAN is creating a sustainable future for healthcare in Nigeria

"Scaling up primary healthcare interventions across low and middle-income countries could save 60 million lives and increase average life expectancy by 3.7 years by 2030." - WHO

For Nigeria to develop a more sustainable, resilient healthcare system, it must increase its sub-national capacity to prevent, detect and respond to diseases at the primary level. Through its Adopt-A-Healthcare-Facility Programme, PSHAN has been at the forefront of this mission. This initiative aims to establish at least one quality primary healthcare centre (PHC) in each of the 774 local government areas (LGAs) and improve health outcomes in Nigeria.

PSHAN supports humanitarian efforts in Nigeria through strategic partnerships

Our goal is to make a positive impact by improving access to quality and affordable healthcare.

Nigeria is the greatest economy in Africa, but its prosperity isn't shared equitably. Providing high-quality primary healthcare to Nigeria's vast and diverse population remains a considerable challenge. PSHAN aims to change that.

World Mosquito Day

How PSHAN's Malaria to Zero program is fighting malaria in Nigeria.

Four African countries account for just over half of all malaria deaths worldwide: Nigeria (31.9%), the Democratic Republic of the Congo (13.2%), the United Republic of Tanzania (4.1%), and Mozambique (3.8%). - WHO.

Our mission at PSHAN is to help eradicate the disease by providing Nigerians access to primary healthcare services, one region at a time.
